A hitman must kill to save the lives of those he cares for. But what happens when good people do bad things for a good reason?

“The Fifth Commandment” is a tale of family, good & evil and the forces that influence the path of one’s life. It is a fast paced story that embraces the notion that there is good in everyone, regardless of circumstances or bad choices. The film sheds light on a timeless concept – at birth, there’s no such thing as good or bad people...circumstances effect us all, and in the end, we are each ultimately responsible for our own outcome. “The Bodyguard” meets “Romeo Must Die” with the action of “Ong Bak” and “The Transporter”.
